

Are photovoltaic panels on roofs legal

Overview

Do you need planning permission to install solar panels on your roof?

An increasing number of people are investing in solar energy. More and more homes are having solar panels, or solar tiles, installed on their roofs. Of course, with such installations, the topic of planning permission and building regulations often comes to the surface.

Can you put solar panels on your roof?

Under changes to permitted development rights, homeowners will be able to put solar panels on their roofs – without having to go through planning – in certain circumstances. A planning application for installing solar panel equipment can take over eight weeks and costs a fee.

Can a business install solar panels on a flat roof?

Businesses are already allowed to install solar panels on flat roofs and will soon be able to install panels that generate more than one megawatt of electricity without permission. These changes have been introduced to make it smoother for solar panels to be installed as car park canopies, said the government.

Are solar panels legal?

Solar panel installations have to pass standard building regulations for the property - it's a legal requirement for many home improvements. The key areas are structural safety of a building (Part A) and electrical safety of a building (Part P).

Can I install solar panels if I don't meet building regulations?

Your local authority can also apply for a Confiscation Order to take away any money you've earned with your system – so there's absolutely no benefit to installing solar panels that don't meet building regulations. It's crucial that your solar installation follows all building regulations.

Can I use solar roof tiles instead of solar panels?

What you need to do is speak to your local council and let them know about your decision to install. Unless there is a valid reason to state otherwise, permission for the installation should be granted. In some conservation areas (such as historical ones), it may be requested that you use solar roof tiles instead of panels.
