Will KFC bring food lockers to restaurants?

Chains including KFC, Burger King, and Smashburger have all announced plans to bring food lockers to their restaurants. The trend has been around for way longer than the pandemic, and isn't just being used by restaurants. Food lockers, in their most basic sense, are devices that are used to store food, often for customers to collect.

Does Burger King use food lockers?

Burger King KFC trialed food lockers at four restaurants in Japan in October, and it also uses similar lockers at its dubbed "restaurant of the future" in Moscow. The automated store, which involves minimum human contact, uses conveyor belts and robots to put food orders in lockers at the front of the store.
