Overview

What is the construction process of a PV solar plant?

Construction of the plant The actual construction process is usually outsourced to one or more contractors who do the engineering, procurement, and construction work (EPC). The process involves all the major and necessary elements that the PV solar plants consist in. PV solar plants use ground mounting systems of solar panels.

How to build a PV solar station?

Identifying the location Before the construction process commences, one needs to identify the place to build the PV solar station and determine the point of connection to the grid. Thus, initially, You will plan the project and obtain planning and connection consents from the local authorities.

How do I choose a foundation for a PV solar plant?

Usually driven piles supports are used in large PV solar plants, being too costly for medium-sized and small ones. Concrete strip foundations can also be used, made of concrete blocks or constructed on site. The choice ultimately depends upon costs considerations and ground conditions.

Do PV solar plants use ground mounting systems?

PV solar plants use ground mounting systems of solar panels. The advantage of the ground mounting system, as compared to the roof-based solar panels systems, is that no two roofs are exactly alike, which significantly limits the possibilities of standardization.

What is a stand-alone solar PV installation?

For the purposes of planning stand-alone solar PV installations are those that are not physically attached to a building, although they can be wired to provide electricity to a building.

How many photovoltaic power plants should be installed?

To provide sufficient supply for the global energy consumption, a cumulative amount of 18 TW of photovoltaic power plants should be installed. This means the solar energy industry has a long way to reach to a point where at least 10% of the world energy consumption is generated by solar plants.
